

THE TIME MACHINE

(Biel Chumillas, 1r ESO B)

Bob was walking along a street. He had been working all day and was tired. He just wanted to go back home. But before that, he wanted to throw the rubbish away. He noticed something strange and shiny mixed with the garbage when he threw the heavy bag. He quickly grabbed the unknown object, curious about what it could be.

"Hmmm," he said, seeing something that looked like a remote controller.

This "controller" had a big blue button in the centre of a small screen.

"Oh, wait. What is this thing?" Bob said to himself.

Tempted by the big button, Bob touched it without thinking. The boy immediately thought, "Nothing happened," before realising he was no longer home. Now, he was in a dense jungle full of strange sounds. When Bob saw a weird big bird, he got scared and touched the button again.

He realised he had travelled to a Middle Ages village and pressed the button again. Now, he was in a...destroyed city? Bob didn't know what this was, but he didn't care and pressed the button again.

"Now, where am I?" He quickly realised he was not standing on a solid floor. He was in the sea! "Come on! I hate being wet!" he said and pressed the button again. Now, Bob was floating in an infinite void, and the controller was flying away from him! He tried to press the button again and could finally do it.

"Back home!" he said. Yes, he was back in the same spot he had been before finding the remote controller, but something was odd.

"Wait a minute! What's a DRAGON doing in front of me?"

THE END